Our aim is to have a balanced panel, discussing different opinions and views.

Don't miss the opportunity to take part in this thought-provoking meeting that will discuss

Stem cell technology has generated a great deal of interest due to its potential application in regenerative medicine. At present, the therapeutic use of stem cells poses many challenges because the underlying mechanism of action of transplanted cells is largely unknown. Despite those concerns market driven therapies are offered based on anecdotal evidence. The evening will debate how to advance stem cell therapy by balancing science, clinical trials, regulation and patient demands.

For catering purpose, please RSVP by Friday the 27th of May 2016
